Dear Library Patron

Someone recently told me, "If we didn't already have this library in Freehold, people would be talking about how we need a place like the library in Freehold."

A vision starts with recognizing possibilities to address wants and needs. After all, without the vision to create libraries in the first place, they could not exist.

But a vision that does not grow, grows dim. We hope you'll stay engaged and involved with the library as we adapt to serve this community well into the future. Talk to me or any of the staff about your ideas. Share your thoughts and dreams.

Because your library needs your vision.

Be well; be well informed.

The Genuine Article

by Jyolsna Sunny, Freehold Public Library Staff

April 2021 marks the 25th anniversary of National Poetry Month. The month was established in April 1996 by the Academy of American Poets to highlight the important role that poets play in our culture.

I've never been very into poetry. I liked the rhythm of the words, but the meaning was often lost on me as I'm not very good at understanding metaphors or any sort of figurative language.

When I was a student at Freehold High School, an author by the name of John Morello came on stage to read us some of his poetry. Being teenagers, we didn't initially care for it because we thought performing slam poetry and acting out the scenes was kind of a dorky thing to do. And to be fair, it was a very cheesy performance. But, as he went on and he continued to speak about his struggles with addiction, bullying, depression, loss, and so much more, we all respected the art a bit more.

After his presentation, Morello offered his book, Buckshot Words, a collection of poems and short stories, for sale. This caused a long line of students waiting to get their own copy and made that school assembly last just a little bit longer. It's been a few years but the autographed book still sits at my bedside and I'll open it up and read a few passages every once in a while. My personal favorite is "Proof."

If you feel like checking out his work for yourself, a ten-page sample of Buckshot Words, featuring two of his poems, can be found at <https://www.johnmorello.com/buckshotwords> or the book may be borrowed from the Freehold Public Library.
