I. Executive Summary

The Freehold Borough Historic Preservation Commission was created by ordinance in 2005. The Historic Preservation Commission is charged with accomplishing the protection, enhancement and perpetuation of especially noteworthy examples or elements of the Borough's environment in order to:

- To safeguard the heritage of the Borough of Freehold by preserving resources within the Borough that reflect elements of its cultural, social, economic and architectural history;
- To encourage the continued use of historic properties and to facilitate their appropriate use;
- To maintain and develop an appropriate and harmonious setting for the historic and architecturally significant buildings, structures, sites, objects, or districts within the Borough of Freehold;
- To stabilize and improve property values within the historic district and foster civic pride in the built environment;
- To promote appreciation of historic properties for education, pleasure and the welfare of the local population;
- To encourage beautification and private investment;
- To manage change by preventing alteration or new construction not in keeping with the historic district;
- To discourage the unnecessary demolition of historic resources;
- To recognize the importance of resources located outside of a historic district by designating individual historic properties;
- To urge property owners and tenants to maintain their properties in keeping with the requirements and standards of this chapter;
- To encourage the proper maintenance and preservation of historic settings and landscapes;
- To discourage inappropriate alterations of historic properties;
- To enhance the visual and aesthetic character, diversity, continuity and interest in the Borough;
- To promote the conservation of historic properties and historic districts and to invite and encourage voluntary compliance for all historic resources within Freehold Borough.

In 2005, Freehold Borough designated its first local historic district, the Freehold Center Historic District. A historic district is a section of a community containing buildings, properties or sites that have been designated as historically or architecturally significant. The designation of a local district protects the significant properties and the historic character of the district.

The personality of a street, neighborhood, district or overall town fosters a sense of identity. That identity often reflect both tangible and intangible history. Historic districts support this identity by preventing unregulated and insensitive change. A historic district is one tool to protect community character, to be used in combination with other planning and revitalization strategies.

Numerous studies show that property values increase in historic districts and that demand for homes in historic districts is statistically higher, as evidenced by higher property values and fewer foreclosures.

When a committee was first formed 20 years ago to consider the prospects for establishing a historic preservation commission in the Borough and designating historic districts, an official from the state Historic Preservation Office toured the town with some members, pointing out areas he thought were natural candidates for designation. His list was long. The commission that was ultimately established by the governing body stuck to a much shorter list. The initial designation was to protect downtown Freehold – our “core” economic area. This built environment has been the heart of the Borough’s life for more than three centuries. By starting small and putting just this one area under the commission’s jurisdiction, the governing body’s intent was to ease the commission into the administration of the Borough, and to see what improvements to the ordinance or administrative procedures needed to be made before any more properties/districts were considered for designation.

But there are many other significant historic structures and areas outside of our downtown, and it is now time to consider establishing new historic districts. The exciting growth as outlined in the Freehold Borough Master Plan requires careful planning. Historic districts are one element of a mindful approach that allows us to preserve our historic fabric during times of progress.

This report was prepared in accordance with Freehold Borough code 2.114.060 which outlines the required contents of any historic district nomination procedure. This report contains information on the history of the proposed Broad Street Historic District, its historical and architectural significance, and descriptions of buildings located therein.

II. Historical and Architectural Significance of Broad Street

The proposed area of the Broad Street Historic District encompasses many of the most important aspects of Freehold Borough’s history.

The homes on Broad Street represent a window into the past. The architectural styles from the Victorian period are represented here. The height, size and ornamentation on the homes is consistent, with a few exceptions. The exceptions represent interesting examples of other architectural styles.

Architectural Styles within the Proposed District

Gothic Revival (1840-1880) : It was mostly popular between 1840-1860 for houses, usually in a wood-frame form referred to as Carpenter Gothic. It is most abundant in the northeastern U.S. The Gothic Revival can be traced back to England in 1749 to romanticize medieval styles there, and the romanticized simplicity of medieval times. The first American Gothic house was by Alexander Jackson Davis in Baltimore, Maryland in 1832.

Identifying features: Steeply pitched roof, cross-gabled, decorated vergeboards, pointed-arch windows, sometimes stained glass, like churches. Gothic window above entry, one-story porch with flattened, Gothic arches. The first appearance of picturesque (asymmetrical and unpredictable) floor plans, indicating the rise of the Romantic Era in America by the 1840s.

Queen Anne (1880-1910) : Queen Anne style was very popular in American architecture at the turn of the 20th century. It is one of the predominant styles of architecture in Freehold Borough and is the predominate style of the proposed Broad Street Historic District. In the majority of homes of this style, even in cases where homeowners have replaced original materials, attempts have been made to replicate the original design.

Identifying features: steeply pitched roof of irregular shape, usually with dominant front-facing gable; patterned shingles, cutaway bay windows, and other devices used to avoid a smooth-walled appearance; asymmetrical façade with partial or full-width porch which is usually one story high and extended along one or both side walls.

Colonial Revival (1880-1955) : Colonial Revival architecture reawakened Americans to the architectural traditions of their colonial past. In the period of 1910-1930, nearly 40% of U.S. homes were built in the Colonial Revival style. It is a hallmark not only of the architecture in the nation but also in Freehold Borough.

Identifying features: accentuated front door, normally with decorative crown supported by pilasters or extended forward, doors commonly have overhead fanlights or sidelights, façade normally shows symmetrically balanced windows and center door; windows with double hung sashes usually with multi-pane glazing in one or both sashes, windows frequently in adjacent pairs.

Minimal Traditional (1935-1950) : The Minimal Traditional house “fulfilled aesthetic and social needs for affordable single-family housing” and was used by the Federal Housing Administration as a prototype to represent the simple and economical home possibility.

Identifying features: Low or immediate-pitched roof, small, generally one-story in height, roof eaves have little or no overhang, double-hung windows, typically multi-pane or 1/1, minimal amounts of architectural detail.

III. Proposed Historic District Boundaries Description

The blocks of Broad Street beginning at the Parker House Condominiums extending south to Park Avenue. The north boundary of the proposed district meets the existing Freehold Center Historic District.

IV. Intention of the District

The primary intention of the district is to recognize the tangible (architectural) and intangible (historic events, persons, etc) of this section of Broad Street. The secondary intention is to protect homeowners who live in the homes here from unchecked change stemming from potential development. The proposed district is immediately adjacent to the Redevelopment Area. There are many large homes that would be prime candidates for changing use requiring exterior changes. Designating the street as a historic district would help maintain the fundamental architectural details of the street, therefore protecting the homeowners who live on this street from their landscape changing drastically.

Historic District designation opens the area up to grants and funding to help in establishing educational programs for the area and physical markers denoting the importance of the area. Funding also supports historic preservation, rehabilitation and restoration of the built environment.

V. Incentives for Residents

The HPC recommends that we provide incentives for home-owners within the historic district who voluntarily follow the ordinance and design-standards. Potential programs include grants (similar to the Housing Rehabilitation Program), proposed 5-year tax abatement program resulting from the declaration of Rehabilitation for all of Freehold Borough, fee waivers for voluntary deed restrictions, fee waivers for permits, grant opportunities and free design/technical guidance services.

VI. FAQs

What will districting do for us that zoning laws can't?

Streets, neighborhoods or districts have their own identities that we value and that give us value in return. Without a historic district overlay, zoning alone can't protect the community's historical integrity and distinctive character. Zoning allows a wide variety of structures and landscaping without considering the unique character and needs of a particular area. A historic district permits rezoning but it establishes a consistent set of development standards unique to the district that don't change with rezoning.

Isn't preservation expensive?

Historic properties become just old buildings when they lose the integrity of compatible materials and design details. Cheap substitution is like taking part of the principal of an investment and throwing it away. Smart money is on preserving older properties intact. Good design and construction will enhance the district, which, in turn lends prestige to the security of our investments. In other words, cheaper materials up front will offset building costs, but if dwarfed by the loss incurred if owners make inappropriate changes that detract from their own and their neighbor's properties.

Example: The cheap quick fix is often the most costly fix in the long run. The life of a vinyl "energy efficient" window is 10-15 years. So, typically during the cycle of a mortgage they are replaced twice. Plus, there is the additional waste of vinyl windows stacked up in landfills. The expense of replacing vinyl window twice and the subsequent environment impact far outprices the cost of restoring original windows.

Won't a historic district lower property values by reducing the number of potential buyers by eliminating those who do not want their property subject to the historic district bureaucracy?

This does not apply in Freehold Borough. Furthermore, this is a baseless argument that is not substantiated by any studies. Properties in historic districts substantially outperform sales of similar properties elsewhere. Where values are declining, preservation stabilizes them.

Preservation sells, and not just because some buyers appreciate historic settings. Buyers are aware that a historic district signifies the mix of positive factors—social, economic, political and cultural – that make living there desirable. The free market has shown that people will pay a premium to buy a property in sheltered communities, whether in historic districts or gated suburban developments.

SIGNIFICANCE EVALUATION:

This is one of several surveyed examples of a prevalent 1860's/1870's house type in Freehold: 2 story dwelling with hipped-roof 3 bay side-hall rectangular plans, full front porches, full-length windows on the first story, and various types of Italianate detailing. These houses may have been constructed by Charles C. Bowne, a noted local builder of the period. This site does not appear on Freehold maps or views prior to 1880; Charles Schantz is the owner on the 1889 atlas.
